On Thursday 3rd April archaeologist Dr Paul Logue and architect Stephen Salley gave a joint presentation covering the extensive archaeological research and subsequent restoration of 10 High Street in Carrickfergus. Using historical maps and detailed drawings, Paul explained the historical development of 10 High Street and discussed the discoveries made during excavation work. Stephen went on to explain the restoration that followed, during which features such as the fine 17th century staircase were conserved. The 'before' and 'after' photos revealed a remarkable transformation and we congratulate Paul and Stephen for their dedication to this innovative project, which was such a pleasure to learn about.
